WORK OF CONGRESS.

The Dependent Pension Bill is a Law.

It is Bitterly Opposed By the Confederate Brigadiers.

The House Considers the District Bill and Fails to Agree on Pension Appropriations.

By the Associated Press.]

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The Committee on Territories have determined to report Mr. Cullom's bill for a new test oath in Utah, with a recommendation that it be postponed indefinitely. It is stated that the committee will adopt the bill recently reported to the Senate to insure purity of elections in Arizona as best suited to the necessities of the case in Utah.

Mr. Ingalls offered a resolution, which was agreed to, instructing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to inquire as to the date when, under the law of precedents, the salaries of the Senators from Montana, Washington and North and South Dakota began.

The Senate then resumed the consideration of the agricultural college aid bill.

The Senate agreed to a conference report on the dependent pension bill. The bill now goes to the President. There was a lively discussion on this bill.

The practical effect of the bill would be, Mr. Berry said, to put ninety per cent of the Union soldiers on the pension roll, and the cry was still for more, and yet Northern Senators or Representatives dared to stand up in opposition to this pension bill. Northern Democrats and Northern Republicans contended with each other as to which will go farthest to satisfy these demands. If any Southern Senator or Representative dared to oppose a pension bill, he was told on one side that he would injure the party, and on the other he was denounced as a traitor who had no right to announce any opinion on the subject of pensions.

Mr. Gorman opposed the conference. The expenditure of pension legislation for the benefit of the Union soldiers and what he said today was on a direct line with what he said on other occasions. Mr. Davis denied the correctness of Mr. Gorman's figures, and said the expenditures under the bill would be about $40,000,000. He denied that the bill was a service pension bill and asserted that it was a disability bill. It was a disability bill, pure and simple.

Mr. Gorman said if the bill became a law there would be a deficit of $100,000,000 in 1892 and even if it did not become a law there would be a deficit of $40,000,000. He called attention to the fact that the bill was a disability bill, and that it was a disability bill, pure and simple. Mr. Gorman said if the bill became a law there would be a deficit of $100,000,000 in 1892 and even if it did not become a law there would be a deficit of $40,000,000. He called attention to the fact that the bill was a disability bill, and that it was a disability bill, pure and simple.

Mr. Ingalls advocated the conference report. This was an obligation just as sacred as that under which the bill was passed, and the Senate was asked to postpone it to a later date. For himself, he was in favor of the removal of limitation in the act and grant arrears of pensions. He did not care whether it cost $100,000,000 or $1,000,000,000.

Mr. Vest spoke of the monstrous abuses that had grown up under the pension system and declared the belief that the pending bill was being pressed for personal and political motives. He asserted that the pension list was unduly swollen in Indiana because it was a pivotal state and its vote was needed to elect the president, and he prophesied that the people of the United States would revolt against the pension system and its abuses.

Mr. Turpie said he had not heard of any clarity in Indiana in the administration of pension bureau, but that he was not prepared to say that political bias had anything to do with the granting or refusing of pensions.

Mr. Hawley expressed the hope that the soldiers would not get the idea from what had been said today that the Senate was favorable to the payment of arrears of pensions or to the equalization of bounties or the payment of the difference between paper money and gold. He thought altogether too much was said about what the nation owed the soldiers. The prominent feeling in his state was that the needy soldier should not suffer, but that money should be wasted on the man who did not need a pension for support. True, the soldier did not want money wasted. They wanted their suffering comrades aided and they want the glory of having fought for their country without respect to other considerations. Finally the discussion closed and the vote was taken. The conference report was agreed to, yeas 34, nays 18.

A conference was ordered on the fortification bill and Mr. Dawes, Mr. Plumb and Mr. Gorman were appointed conferees on the part of the Senate.

An Executive session followed. Adjourned.

In the House.—WASHINGTON, June 23.—Chairman Conger says he will call the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures together tomorrow or Wednesday to consider the silver bill.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the District of Columbia business. The committee rose without final action on the district bill.

CONFERENCE ON THE GENERAL PENSION APPROPRIATION BILL FAILED TO AGREE. THE HOUSE INSISTED UPON A DISAGREEMENT TO THE SENATE AMENDMENTS AND ADJOURNED.

LONDON'S NEW TOWER.

The Ground is Already Purchased to Build It On—Numerous Designs.

The Watkin tower is so far on the way to become an accomplished fact that a site of 300 acres has been purchased, says the Court Circular. Of this ground one-half will be required for the tower and the other half will be laid out as a pleasure garden. The promoters have not been starved in the matter of designs. They have had plans sent from the continent and from America, as well as from all parts of the United Kingdom.

Some of the competing engineers have branched into remarkable designs. One, for example, has provided for a steam tramway from the base to the summit of the tower, and another has given his structure an initial span in the form of a dome large enough to contain the whole of the houses of parliament. The steam tramway, however, is not likely to be constructed. The promoters have decided that the transport within the tower shall be effected entirely by hydraulic power.

The House conferees agreed to the amendment authorizing the President to appoint a commission to select a suitable site on the Pacific Coast for a dry dock, and the Senate agreed to the appointment of a similar commission to select a site for one on the shore of the Gulf. WEBSTER AND EVERETT.

Only Two Days' Difference in Their Ages at the Time of Death.

(New York Ledger.)

Daniel Webster was born January 18, 1782, and died October 4, 1852, aged 70 years, 9 months and 6 days. Edward Everett was born April 11, 1794, and died January 15, 1865, aged 70 years, 9 months and 4 days. The difference between their ages at the time of death was therefore only two days. The almost fraternal relations of these great men for so many years, during which either might have been proud of the other's position but for his own, was of a sort not often seen in public life, uninterrupted and never chilled by selfish jealousies. It is beautifully referred to by Mr. Webster in one of his letters to Mr. Everett.

"We now and then see stretching across the heavens a clear blue, cerulean sky without cloud or mist or haze. And such appears to me our acquaintance from the time when I heard you for a week recite your lessons in the little school house in Short street to the date hereof."

AS BAD AS MURDER.

A HORSE THIEF WHO DID NOT COMPLETE HIS JOB.

The Two Horses Stolen From O. L. Gibbs Are Found Hidden Away on the Desert Dead From Starvation.

About nine weeks ago Oscar L. Gibbs found the fence of his pasture cut, the hatched used lying near. Investigation developed the fact that five horses had been stolen during the night and driven up the road. Mr. Gibbs immediately notified the local officers and a vigorous search was started.

Three of the horses were found within a few days safe in a pasture near the city, where they had been impounded as strays. The most diligent inquiry, however, failed to bring to light the other two.

One was a fine mare, sixteen and one half hands high, belonging to Mr. Gibbs, and worth at least $150. The other was a driving mare, owned by Douglas Gray, valued at $100.

The search for the missing horses has never been abandoned, and when Henry Garfias was told by a Mexican boy yesterday of two horses lying dead near the "Hole-in-the-Rock," he immediately notified Mr. Gibbs. The latter drove out to investigate. About a mile up the side road that leads from the Tempe line into the "Hole-in-the-Rock," he came upon the carcasses and found that they were those of the stolen stock. They had starved to death.

One had been tied to a palo verde, the other was attached to the butt end of a saguaro, which she had overturned in her struggles for escape. When they left the pasture they were as fat as horses could be; when found their skeletons did not bear enough flesh to attract the crows.

The thief must have brought them the same night to this out-of-the-way place and tied them up, intending to take them away the next night. He must have been a cowardly and cruel knave, for it seems as though he did not return for the horses, and he would have been able to find them. Food and water were near in abundance, but there the poor beasts stood and slowly died, with plenty all around them.

THE PHOENIX FOUNDRY.

AN ENTERPRISE THAT PROMISES GREAT USEFULNESS.

Willcraft & Co. Quietly Pushing Their Property to the Front to Their Own and the City's Benefit.

Phoenix has one industry quietly progressing that promises to be of vast benefit to the city. J. W. Willcraft & Co. have in operation at the southwestern corner of town, an iron foundry plant which, though small at present, shows every evidence of thrift and skill and seems but a nucleus for the establishment of something greater.

A REPUBLICAN reporter yesterday visited the works. The outfit embraces all necessary machinery for the manufacture of castings up to one ton in weight. The cupola furnace is of the water-jacket pattern and has a capacity of a ton and a half of molten metal. It is twenty-four inches in diameter, inside measurement. Draft is furnished by a large Sturtevant blower driven by a twenty-horse power engine. A large number of superior castings have been turned out during the last few months, complete sets of shoes and dies for the Phoenix and Castle Creek mills being among the latest productions. A number of large castings have been made, with uniform success. The works have also provided quite an accommodation to local builders and machinists in the production of sash weights and the odds and ends of iron work that are constantly being needed.

Mr. A. W. Taylor who is associated with Mr. Willcraft, is an experienced smelter man, having been for years employed on the Grand and the Denver smelters. He says: "We are very favorably impressed with the mineral outlook in the vicinity of Phoenix and have under consideration the establishment of a smelting plant, in conjunction with our works. I can handle any of the carbonate lead or copper ores of this region at a low cost per ton and extract the maximum percentage of metal from them. The possibilities are that we shall within a few months set up a ten-ton water-jacket and advertise for custom work, or buy ore outright."

No enterprise is more useful to the business interests of a city than a smelter requiring as it does a large number of employees and throwing into circulation a corresponding amount of coin. It is to be hoped that Messrs. Willcraft & Taylor may succeed and that their operations may grow to immense proportions.
